

Joint Occupational Health and Safety Committee and Worker Representatives

British Columbia

8 HOUR TRAINING COURSE

By the end of this course you will have covered the following issues:

- ▶ The Act and the Regulations made under it.
- ▶ The means that allow the joint occupational health and safety representatives to fulfil their responsibilities.
- ▶ The rules and procedures of the JOHS committee; and
- ▶ The principles of consensus building regarding health and safety issues.
- ▶ The process for selecting JOHS committee members
- ▶ The responsibilities of committee representatives.

Our Joint Occupational Health and Safety Committee and Worker Representatives training course focuses on content that meets the most current occupational health and safety regulations and ensures committee representative's get the training, covering committee specific rules and procedures.

Employers of provincially regulated organizations are responsible for the establishment of a health and safety committee in the workplace. Most Canadian health and safety legislations set the guidelines for organizing the committee.

We will achieve this through supportive classroom discussion, and by participating in collaborative exercises.
